REPUBLICAN QUESTIONS FOR THE RECORD

COVER PAGE
Rebecca Slaughter

RANKING MEMBER TED CRUZ (R-TX)

Bipartisanship at the FTC

For many years, the FTC was known for its bipartisan collegiality and collaboration on key issues. I am disappointed that is no longer the case. When we met in my office, we discussed this matter at length and my concerns with the recent direction of the agency.

You spoke quite fondly of working with former Commissioners Phillips and Wilson as well former Chairman Simons—all of whom were Republican commissioners. You even noted that being challenged by differing viewpoints benefitted your work as a commissioner.

- 1. Do you agree that the FTC is at its best when it operates at full capacity and that, as a commissioner, you benefit from the perspective of minority commissioners even when you disagree?

Yes, absolutely.

Redaction of FTC Staff Advice

During the hearing we discussed my serious concerns that you and Commissioner Bedoya voted to redact Commissioner Christine Wilson's dissent in order to hide the fact that Chairwoman Khan did not follow the advice of the Designated Agency Ethics Official (DAEO) to recuse herself from a matter before the Commission.

- 2. You cited a 1984 Commission precedent put in place by former Chairman Jim Miller. Please provide the Committee with a copy of the 1984 Commission meeting minutes from when that precedent was put in place.

See attached.

Federal Employee Viewpoint Survey

Until recently, the FTC had a reputation as one of the best federal agencies to work for. But that reputation has taken a major hit under Chairwoman Khan.

The annual Federal Employee Viewpoint Surveys tell us that there is something seriously wrong. In 2020, 87 percent of surveyed employees said they believed that the agency's leaders had "high standards of honesty and integrity." In the 2022 survey, less than half of employees shared that belief. The FTC has slipped from its place as the second-best midsize agency to work for in 2019 to the bottom of the list.

I wrote Chairwoman Khan a letter about this earlier this year. In response to my concerns about whether any action has been taken to improve staff morale, she said that since the 2022 survey was administered, her office has been "creating opportunities for continued dialogue about priorities, action steps and progress.” I was disappointed that Chairwoman Khan did not identify any concrete actions taken by her office to address the recent survey results.

- 3. As someone who served on the commission when the FTC was one of the top-rated federal agencies, why do you think the morale of FTC staff sunk so low so quickly? Please be specific.

As discussed below, I have solicited input from staff throughout the agency to better understand changes in the FEVS results. Although our staff’s views are not monolithic, I heard several consistent themes. These have included: communication of priorities and expectations; the events policy that limited the ability of staff to participate in public events (now rescinded); the intensity of the workload given limited resources; and frustration about being stuck in the middle of public disputes between Commissioners.

- 4. What specific actions have you taken to increase the staff’s view of FTC leadership and overall satisfaction with the agency?

The first step I took was to meet directly with staff, division by division, throughout the agency, to ask them what factors they believe were behind the survey results. This is a continuation of a practice I began when I got to the agency of setting up regular check-ins with all our staff to ensure that they have an opportunity to share their views with me and have their questions answered by me, outside of the context of any specific matter. I routinely share the feedback I receive, as well as concrete suggestions, with the Chair’s office and the Office of the Executive Director. I have also endeavored to communicate directly with case teams as early as possible to learn about their investigations, share my perspectives, and highlight questions or priorities I am likely to have as the case develops. In addition, I have worked hard to resolve disagreements with fellow Commissioners, articulate our differences respectfully when they cannot be resolved, and in all cases to keep staff out of disagreements between Commissioners.

It is important to note that diagnosing a problem correctly is only a first step; we must then apply solutions and continue to evaluate whether those solutions are working effectively or need to be modified.

Remote Work by FTC Employees

In the hearing we discussed my concerns about the number of FTC employees working remotely.

- 5. For each workday since September 25, 2021, how many FTC employees have entered FTC headquarters? As an alternative to listing out each day, you may provide a spreadsheet with badge entry logs for each workday with unique but anonymized identifiers, such as employee or badge ID numbers.

Matters of Commission administration, including ID badge information, are within the purview of the Chair’s office; I have passed this question along to them.

I would, however, like to emphasize that, for more than five years now, I have observed first-hand the FTC's hard-working staff showing up to work on behalf of the American public each and every day, from Seattle to Atlanta and here in D.C., with enthusiasm and dedication. I care very much that they show up; where they do so is not particularly important to me as long as the work is getting done well. And that is undoubtedly happening. Some of the Commission's work is inherently location-inflexible, such as for trial teams in a courtroom or investigators who need to use special technology, but I know that many staff greatly appreciate being able to do location-flexible work from locations other than the office, consistent with OPM guidance and the Telework Promotion Act.

6. Since September 25, 2021, how many days have you been physically in the office at FTC headquarters (by number of times you badged in for the period)?

Since the FTC's Evacuation Order was lifted in February 2022, I have worked from the headquarters office approximately two days per week on average, not including when I have been traveling or when my work requires my presence at non-FTC locations. All of my schedules are available to the public, and I have attached them here for your convenience.

SENATOR JERRY MORAN (R-KS)

1. Data Privacy: FTC Acting Without Congress

Last year, the U.S. Supreme Court in West Virginia v. EPA reaffirmed the principle that federal agencies must operate within their statutory boundaries, emphasizing the need for a clear grant of authority under the "major questions doctrine" for rulemaking. Since that decision was issued, the FTC has pursued rulemaking on a number of issues, including data privacy.

How should the FTC apply the West Virginia v. EPA decision when considering rulemaking projects? Can significant rulemaking projects be undertaken, even if the FTC has no clear grant of authority from Congress to pursue the rulemaking?

Response:

The FTC must apply all relevant precedent, including West Virginia v. EPA, when considering or pursuing rulemakings (or, for that matter, other agency actions). The West Virginia decision says, in plain English, that agencies cannot creatively infer grants of authority over major political or economic questions—such grants of authority must be clear.

Congress, in passing section 5 of the FTC Act, 15 U.S.C. 45, explicitly gave the FTC a broad mandate to stamp out “unfair methods of competition” and (later, in 1938) also “unfair or deceptive acts or practices.” To carry out that mandate, Congress gave the Commission powerful tools, including a variety of investigation and enforcement mechanisms, the potent study power of section 6(b), 15 U.S.C. 46(b), and the power “to make rules and regulations” to further the Act’s purposes in section 6(g), 15 U.S.C. 46(g). I find the authority “to make rules and regulations” in section 6(g) quite clear. In addition to this original general grant of rulemaking authority, a specific rulemaking directive to address unfair and deceptive acts and practices was added by Congress when it enacted section 18 of the FTC Act in 1975. This provision empowers the FTC to promulgate trade regulation rules to prescribe “rules which define with specificity acts or practices which are unfair or deceptive acts or practices in or affecting commerce,” 15 U.S.C. 57a(a)(1)(b), provided that those acts or practices are “prevalent” in the market, 15 U.S.C. 57a(b)(3).

Congress has also, in section 22 of the FTC Act, required all FTC rulemaking, whether under section 6(g) or section 18, to adhere to requirements beyond those of the Administrative Procedure Act, such as conducting preliminary and final regulatory analyses that describe reasonable alternatives considered and estimate the costs and benefits of the agency’s proposal as well as the costs and benefits of the alternatives. 15 U.S.C. 57b-3.

The rulemaking authority set forth in section 18 is the basis of many long-standing and valuable Commission consumer protection rules that are not explicitly directed by statute, including the Funeral Rule, 16 C.F.R. pt. 432, the Eyeglass Rule, 16 C.F.R. pt. 456, the Negative Option Rule, 16 C.F.R. pt. 425, and the Business Opportunity Rule, 16 C.F.R. pt. 437, to name just a few.

Of course, any rule the Commission promulgates is subject to judicial review.

Data Privacy: Preemption of State Laws

Do you believe a federal comprehensive data privacy law should preempt state laws? Why or why not?

Response:

I strongly support a federal data privacy law. I understand that any law that Congress enacts is likely to be the result of a carefully crafted compromise, and I believe it is the prerogative of Congress to determine the elements of that compromise. As a general matter, I am sympathetic to the notion that it is at best challenging and at worst impossible for businesses to comply in good faith with a patchwork of different and potentially contradictory state laws. Statutory preemption provisions can be crafted narrowly to invalidate only state laws that present an actual conflict with federal law or they can be crafted more broadly. I would be very concerned about a weak federal law that broadly preempts state laws.

2. FTC “Zombie” Votes

Last November, Politico reported that Commissioner Chopra submitted as many as 20 votes on his last day at the FTC that, thanks to the FTC voting rules, would allow those votes to be used for Commission business for up to 60 days.

Allowing Commissioners’ votes to count after they depart their post seems counter to common sense and good governance principles. This is why I introduced the FTC Integrity Act, which would ensure this practice would not continue. An amendment version of this bill received unanimous support in this Committee last Congress.

Regardless of whether Commissioner Chopra’s votes comported with the Commission’s rules at the time, do you believe that Commissioners should be able to vote after leaving the FTC?

Response:

No Commissioner can or should be able to cast a vote after leaving the Commission.

3. Staff Morale at the FTC

An April 2023 study found that staff morale at the FTC has decreased dramatically since 2020, when the Commission was the highest-ranking federal agency in terms of employee satisfaction. Particularly concerning are scores pertaining to FTC employee satisfaction with Commission leadership, which fell from 84.3 in 2020 to 46.6 in 2022.

In general, what factors contribute to high employee satisfaction? How can organization leaders impact the morale of staff?

In your experience, why has employee satisfaction with FTC leadership fallen at such an alarming rate since 2020? What have you done to rectify this situation?

Response:

The career staff of the FTC are our agency's greatest asset. They are brilliant, dedicated, hardworking, professional civil servants. They do extraordinary work, often under challenging circumstances, and they are entitled to respect and appreciation for that work.

I was very disturbed by the results of the FEVS survey, and I met directly with staff, division by division, throughout the agency to ask them what factors they believed contributed to the survey results. This is a continuation of a practice I began when I got to the agency of setting up regular check-ins with the staff to ensure that they have an opportunity to share their views with me and have their questions answered by me, outside of the context of any specific matter. I routinely share the feedback I receive, as well as concrete suggestions, with the Chair's office and the Office of the Executive Director.

Although our staff's views are not monolithic, I heard several consistent themes. These have included: communication of priorities and expectations on particular cases; the events policy that limited the ability of staff to participate in public events (since rescinded); the intensity of the workload given limited resources; and frustration about being stuck in the middle of public disputes between Commissioners.

It is important to note that diagnosing a problem correctly is only a first step; we must then apply solutions and continue to evaluate whether those solutions are working effectively or need to be modified.

4. Motor Vehicle Dealers Trade Regulation Rule

Last summer, the FTC noticed the Motor Vehicle Dealers Trade Regulation Rule, which would add requirements for dealerships to follow and change the way Americans purchase vehicles. I understand the FTC did not pursue an Advanced Notice of Proposed Rulemaking in this case, which would have given stakeholders an additional opportunity to provide the FTC information on the car buying process.

Generally speaking, do you believe the FTC should pursue all available information-gathering avenues and conduct thorough cost-benefit analyses before acting to implement a significant rule, like the Motor Vehicle Dealers Rule?

Response:

One of my favorite parts about rulemaking is the robust public records that our proceedings can develop. I regularly encourage members of the public, businesses and business associations, consumer groups, Members of Congress, state attorneys general, academics, and others to participate in our rulemakings. I agree with you that the Motor Vehicle Dealers Rule is a significant rule, and I am grateful that an extremely robust comment record was generated in response to the Commission's notice of proposed rulemaking, including from ordinary car consumers, dealers' associations, individual dealers, advocates, and others.

(More than eleven thousand of these comments are posted on the rulemaking docket here: <https://www.regulations.gov/docket/FTC-2022-0046>.)

It is true that the Commission proposed this rule without first conducting an advance notice of proposed rulemaking. As you know, for some rules, including rules we issue under section 18 of the FTC Act such as the Funeral Rule, Eyeglass Rule, and Business Opportunity Rule, an advance notice of proposed rulemaking is required by statute. For other rules, such as the Children’s Online Privacy Protection Act Rule, the Telemarketing Sales Rule, and the Made in USA Rule, no ANPR is required, and the Commission may proceed with an NPRM (the process most agencies use under the Administrative Procedure Act) to issue or amend the rule. In the case of the Motor Vehicle Dealers Rule, Congress authorized the FTC to issue such a rule using the ordinary process of the Administrative Procedure Act.

Your question also asked whether I believe that the Commission should conduct thorough cost-benefit analysis before acting to implement (or propose, in this case) a significant rule. The answer is yes, I do believe that the Commission should conduct thorough cost-benefit analysis. Such an analysis is also required, for most new or major rules, by section 22 of the FTC Act. I am grateful to the tremendous staff of the FTC’s Bureau of Economics for their nuanced and thorough exploration of the costs and benefits of the proposed rule and its reasonable alternatives, which features prominently in the notice of proposed rulemaking. See 87 Fed. Reg. 42012, 42031–44 (July 13, 2022). The notice also specifically asked about this analysis and requested additional data, views, or arguments about costs and benefits. I am committed to carefully considering the record on the NPRM. Of course, any rule the Commission finalizes will be subject to judicial review.

SENATOR DAN SULLIVAN (R-AK)

1. During the hearing, when asked where the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) derives its power, you answered, “From the statutes that Congress has passed.”

Since being sworn in as a Federal Trade Commissioner in 2018, you’ve been very vocal in arguing that antitrust enforcement should not be “race-blind” and “value-neutral.” For example, at a 2021 panel for the Economic Security Project, titled “Centering Anti-racism in the Antimonopoly Fight, you stated, “I think it’s time to start talking about utilizing antitrust as an anti-racist tool.”¹ Later that year, during an interview with CPI, you declared that “antitrust can and should be deployed in the fight against racism,” and went on to say that the FTC needs to “think strategically about using antitrust as a tool for combatting structural racism.”²

More recently, you’ve argued that the FTC should prioritize cases that “disproportionately affect already marginalized communities and populations”³ in an effort to “equalize our society more effectively.”⁴

Can you cite to the statutory authority that authorizes the FTC to use antitrust laws as “anti-racist tools” in order to “equalize our society more effectively?”

Response:

The FTC enforces the laws that Congress passes; primarily this involves bans on unfair or deceptive acts or practices as well as unfair methods of competition. It also includes additional statutes such as the Equal Credit Opportunity Act.

There are many more violations of the laws that we enforce than we have time or resources to pursue, so one of the hardest parts of our job is making difficult decisions about what cases to pursue and how to prioritize them.

I believe our priority should be ensuring that all Americans have the equal protection of the laws we enforce. Unfortunately, experience has taught us that if we are not deliberate about ensuring that our cases protect all Americans, some communities may be unintentionally excluded from our enforcement efforts. One reason for this is that some communities are more aware of the laws the FTC enforces and more likely to file complaints with us (or hire lawyers to do so). That is why, on the consumer protection side of our agency, we have for decades counted on our Every Community Initiative, which recognizes that we need to be proactive in ensuring everyone—not only people of color but also seniors, veterans, kids, non-English speakers, rural Americans—gets our attention.

⁴ <https://www.protocol.com/the-first-100-days-tech-in-the-biden-administration>

We have not brought this same attention to our competition work, which I think is problematic. Without transparency into which communities are affected by the cases we pursue, we could inadvertently end up excluding significant portions of the American public from our enforcement efforts.

For example, imagine we had to decide which of two hospital mergers our limited resources would allow us to investigate at one time; we could make that decision based purely on the dollar value of the transaction or initial estimates of harm, but that would likely mean we prioritize enforcement in wealthy urban or suburban areas at the expense of rural areas where communities can least afford a marginal dollar increase in healthcare cost or least tolerate the closure of a facility.

You ask about specific statutory authority to prioritize matters that are not spelled out explicitly in our antitrust laws. One of the features of the FTC Act is that it is a broad statute that allows us to address market problems as they evolve and throughout the economy. That requires us to apply broad and general statutory language to a range of specific issues and priorities. A small sampling of language that does not appear in the statutes we enforce but has been key to the Commission's efforts over the last century include: healthcare, occupational licensing, pharmaceuticals, consumer welfare, data security, hypothetical monopolist. As market practices and conditions evolve, we should continue to adapt our priorities with the goal of ensuring all Americans are protected by the laws we enforce.

ordinance to gradually eliminate the entry restrictions for Chicago taxicabs.

For the minute record, the five Commissioners were recorded as voting in the affirmative.

(12) Docket 9000 - International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation, et al.

Background: On November 26, 1974, the Commission issued a complaint charging International Telephone & Telegraph Corporation and ITT Continental Baking, Inc., with violation of §5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act and §2(a) of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Act, in the conduct of their wholesale baking business. The matter was tried before an Administrative Law Judge.

On May 1, 1981, the Administrative Law Judge filed his Initial Decision containing an Order to Cease and Desist. Both sides appealed to the Commission from the Initial Decision. Briefs were filed and an oral argument was heard by the Commission on January 7, 1982.

By walk-around adjudicative memorandum of February 24, 1984, Commissioner Douglas circulated "For Information" his evaluation of the legal and economic standard that Commissioner Bailey proposed to use in deciding this matter.

On March 27, 1984, this matter was reassigned from Commissioner Bailey to Commissioner Douglas.

By non-agenda adjudicative matter of May 25, 1984, Commissioner Douglas circulated "For Information" a draft Opinion.

By walk-around matter of June 22, 1984, Commissioner Douglas moved approval of the attached Final Order and Opinion.

By walk-around adjudicative matter of July 24, 1984, Commissioner Douglas circulated "For Information" a corrected draft of the Commission's Opinion and Final Order.

By non-agenda adjudicative matter of July 25, 1984, Commissioner Bailey circulated her statement concurring in part and dissenting in part.

By non-agenda matter of July 25, 1984, Commissioner Pertschuk circulated "For Information" the advice that he joined in Commissioner Bailey's Statement.

Commission Action: On July 25, 1984, the Opinion of the Commission by Commissioner Douglas was approved.

For the reasons stated in its Opinion, the Commission reversed the Initial Decision and dismissed the complaint in all respects.

The Final Order was approved and, with the Opinion of the Commission and the Statement by Commissioner Bailey Concurring in Part and Dissenting in Part, in which Commissioner Pertschuk joined, was referred to the Secretary for issuance and service.

For the public record, Commissioners Miller, Douglas and Calvani were recorded as voting in the affirmative. Commissioners Bailey and Pertschuk were recorded as concurring in part and dissenting in part.

(13) Procedures at Commission Level

In re: Confidentiality Rules

Submission: In memorandum of May 16, 1984, the Deputy General Counsel rendered a decision on the propriety of proposed testimony to be delivered by Commissioner Pertschuk on May 16, 1984, before the Fossil and Synthetics Fuels, and Commerce and Transportation Subcommittees, House Committee on Energy and Commerce. The testimony quoted directly from two nonpublic staff memoranda provided to the Commission in connection with its consideration of the proposed Socal/Gulf merger.

July 26, 1984

It was the opinion of the Deputy General Counsel that the staff memoranda constituted privileged material protected from mandatory public disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act, with the possible exception of segregable factual portions not protected by the United States Code.

The General Counsel advised "The Commission's Rules provide for a single mechanism through which nonpublic documents covered by Rule 4.10 may be made publicly available. That mechanism consists of the FOIA process delineated in Rule 4.11. ... The Rules delegate to the Deputy Executive Director for Planning and Information and the General Counsel limited authority to authorize certain disclosures; otherwise, only the Commission itself, acting collectively, may exercise discretion to waive the protections afforded ... documents under Rule 4.10 and the FOIA. Accordingly, under the Rules, no individual Commissioner or Commission employee has the right to publicly divulge nonpublic material outside of the FOIA process. ..."

By walk-around memorandum of July 16, 1984, Chairman Miller moved adoption of the Deputy General Counsel's opinion.

In non-agenda "For Information" memorandum of July 25, 1984, Commissioner Bailey set forth her reasons for casting an abstaining vote in this matter.

With non-agenda "For Information" matter of July 25, 1984, Commissioner Pertschuk circulated a dissenting statement.

Commission Action: On July 25, 1984, to protect the deliberative privilege regarding materials submitted by staff and to reaffirm the need as a body for full and frank staff debate for FTC decisions, the Commission adopted the Opinion by the Deputy General Counsel on the Commission's confidentiality Rules.

For the minute record, Commissioners Miller, Douglas and Calvani were recorded as voting in the affirmative. Commissioner Pertschuk was recorded as voting in the negative with a dissenting statement. Commissioner Bailey was recorded as abstaining.

(14) File 822 3197 - American Society of Sanitary Engineering

Background: During the course of an investigation by the Bureau of Consumer Protection of alleged exclusionary conduct on the part of the American Society of Sanitary Engineering and the International Association of Plumbing and Mechanical Officials, evidence was developed indicating that ASSE had unreasonably refused to extend standards coverage to an innovative plumbing device manufactured by J.H. Industries.

Staff Recommendation: With memoranda of June 19 and July 3, 1984, the Bureau of Consumer Protection forwarded a complaint charging ASSE with violation of §5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act. An executed consent agreement with the company was also submitted with the recommendation that
